Authors and editors' biodatas

Paula Antela Costa, University of Liverpool
ORCID: 0000-0002-6829-7109

Paula Antela Costa graduated in English language and literature with a minor in French in 2017 at the University de Santiago de Compostela. After her degree, she completed an MA in teaching Spanish as a foreign language at the University of Sevilla (2018). During the school year 2018-2019, she worked as a teaching assistant in Bordeaux as well as taught Spanish at the Instituto Cervantes. When she returned to Spain, she took an MA in Secondary School Education (Foreign Languages) at the University of Santiago de Compostela (2019-2020) while teaching Spanish to international students at the University. Working now as a lecturer at the University of Liverpool, her main interests are digital education, interculturality, gamification, digital humanities, and gender studies.

Marián Arribas-Tomé, University of East Anglia
ORCID: 0000-0003-1838-0315

Marián Arribas-Tomé is Lecturer in translation studies, language and politics, and Spanish at the University of East Anglia in the UK, and a member of the Higher Education Academy. She has worked for six UK universities in Glasgow, London, and Norwich. She develops projects to support diversity and inclusion such as www.spanishbytes.com and www.linguabytes.com. She is also a trustee of the not-for-profit organisation Original Projects and a member of the executive committee of the University Council of Modern Languages. She is working on several innovation and teaching development projects with partners within the European university network Aurora Alliance.

Lourdes Barquín Sanmartín, The University of Edinburgh
ORCID: 0000-0001-7892-2177

Lourdes Barquín Sanmartín holds a BA in translation and interpretation studies, a Postgraduate Certificate in education, and an MA in Spanish applied linguistics. She has a strong background in teaching Spanish in the UK, both in secondary and higher education. She is now based at the University of Edinburgh, where she teaches Spanish and pursues her PhD on language acquisition and hispanic linguistics. Her doctoral research focuses on native English learners of French and Spanish as this is the predominant language combination among British students. Her PhD hypothesis supports that a previous knowledge of French can facilitate the acquisition of the mood and aspect in Spanish, for which she was awarded the British Spanish Society scholarship in collaboration with BBVA in 2021.

Vicens Colomer i Domínguez
ORCID: 0000-0001-6672-3824

Vicens Colomer i Domínguez is Senior Lecturer in Spanish and linguistics at the University of Roehampton (London) and tutor of portfolios and final Master's dissertation at the University of Barcelona (UB), Spain. He has worked as a Spanish language teacher and language teacher trainer in Spain, Ireland, and in the UK. Having completed an MA in teaching Spanish as a foreign language at UB, he is currently finishing his PhD at the University of Roehampton. He has varied research interests, which include differences between learning/acquiring second language and foreign language, the importance of the acquisition of the sociocultural, and intercultural communicative competences and the impact on the identity of a foreign language student while learning a new language. He is currently Chair of ELEUK Association.

Alba del Pozo García, University of Leeds
ORCID: 0000-0003-1081-8917

Dr Alba del Pozo García is Lecturer in Spanish language at the University of Leeds. Before joining Leeds, she taught Spanish at the University of Nottingham and at the University of Birmingham. She has also collaborated with the Instituto Cervantes in Leeds as a language tutor and organised cultural activities. She holds a PhD in Spanish literature, an MA in comparative literature, and a BA in Hispanic studies by the Autonomous University of Barcelona. She also completed a postgraduate training course on teaching Spanish as a foreign language. She is currently interested in the scholarship surrounding teaching Spanish as a foreign language and language learning methodologies. Specifically, she has published works on peer oral assessment, CLIL (Content and Language Integrated Learning), and intercultural skills.

Rocío Díaz-Bravo, Universidad de Granada
ORCID: 0000-0001-9381-9258

Rocío Díaz-Bravo is Lecturer in Spanish Linguistics at the University of Granada and Visiting Research Associate at King's College London. She has worked as a Spanish language teacher in Spain, Norway, Poland, and, mainly, in the UK (University of Cambridge, Queen Mary University of London, The University of Manchester, London School of Economics, and University College London, where she worked as language coordinator). Having completed an MA in digital humanities, an MA in teaching Spanish as a foreign language, and a PhD in Spanish linguistics, she has varied research interests, which include Spanish linguistics, Spanish language teaching, digital humanities, and technology-enhanced language learning. She is one of the Editorial Assistant of the Journal of Spanish Language Teaching.

Lourdes Hernández-Martín, London School of Economics and Political Sciences
ORCID: 0000-0003-2804-4390

Lourdes Hernández-Martín is Language Coordinator (Spanish projects and Arabic language) at the Language Centre of the London School of Economics and Political Sciences. Lourdes is one of the founder members of ELE-UK and currently coordinates, with Dr Carlos Soler Montes, the ELEUK working group on decolonising the teaching of Spanish. Her main research interests are currently the use of ethnography and linguistic landscapes in language learning, and project-based learning. More information at: https://www.lse.ac.uk/language-centre/people/lourdes-hernández-martín

Alfonso Hernández-Torres, Instituto Cervantes de Londres
ORCID: 0000-0003-2078-3666

Alfonso Hernández-Torres holds a PhD in applied linguistics from the University of Granada. He's a Spanish teacher and trainer, first at the Palacky University of Olomouc (Czech Republic) and later at the University of Debrecen, the Cervantes Institute in Budapest (Hungary), Brasilia (Brazil), and the Teacher Training Department of the Cervantes Institute in Madrid (Spain). He's currently a professor at the Cervantes Institute in London. He has also published various articles and teaching materials for Spanish as a foreign language on new technologies and grammatical models from a cognitive point of view. His research areas are TELL (Technology-Enhanced Language Learning), cognitive grammar, and the use of images to teach grammar.

Marina Rabadán Gómez, University of Liverpool
ORCID: 000-0003-2188-0353

Marina Rabadán Gómez holds a Licenciatura Filología Inglesa from the Universidad de Huelva, a Master's degree in teaching Spanish as a foreign language from the Universitat de Barcelona, and a PhD in applied linguistics from Leeds Beckett University. She is a lecturer at the University of Liverpool and her research interests relate to the development of pragmatic competences in students of Spanish as a foreign language. Marina has also trained future teachers of Spanish; she is an author and consultant for SFL materials, and has contributed to research and teaching in Public Service Interpreting training. Her latest publication is "Developing pragmatic competence in students of Spanish FL: A Data-Driven Approach" in Cerdeira Núñez and del Pozo García, 2021.

Mario Saborido Beltrán, The University of Edinburgh
ORCID: 0000-0001-8089-1154

Mario Saborido Beltrán holds an undergraduate degree in English studies (University of Granada) and an MScR in applied linguistics to the teaching of Spanish as a foreign language (Antonio de Nebrija University). He is a tutor in Spanish language and Hispanic cultures at the Department of European Languages and Cultures (University of Edinburgh), where he is also doing his PhD on linguistic beliefs and attitudes towards the dialectal varieties of peninsular Spanish.

Elena Solá Simón, Universiteit Leiden
ORCID: 0000-0002-3115-1659

Elena Solá Simón is a teacher at the University of Strathclyde. She has an Honours degree in English philology, an MRes in translation studies, and an MPhil in applied linguistics. She is currently undertaking PhD studies at the University of Leiden (Netherlands), in which she is focusing on the implementation of a cognitive-operative approach in the L2 instruction of Spanish mood contrast within a university setting. Her academic interests include applied linguistics, in particular, second language acquisition and pedagogy, translation, and sociolinguistics. She is particularly interested in the implementation of interactive teaching methods in the language classroom and the cognitive-operative approach for the explicit introduction of grammar. Recent publications: 2019, 'A Single Concept to Teach Mood Contrast in Spanish', Dutch Journal of Applied Linguistics 8(1), 117-135; 2020, and 'Una Aplicación Empírica de la Gramática Cognitiva-Operativa a la Enseñanza del Contraste Modal en Español (LE)' marcoELE 31, 70-90.

Carlos Soler Montes, The University of Edinburgh
ORCID: 0000-0002-4085-9878

Dr Carlos Soler Montes is Senior Lecturer at the University of Edinburgh where he teaches Spanish linguistics and advanced Spanish language courses. He is also the Learning and Teaching Director of the Department of European Languages and Cultures. As a researcher, he is particularly interested in the area of language variation from a pluricentric perspective and how this variation can be dealt with by native speakers, as well as learners of Spanish and new speakers of the language. Carlos is very committed to teaching. He has obtained a thorough training in language pedagogy and has worked as a Spanish language teacher throughout his career, teaching Spanish at various North American Universities (Connecticut, New Mexico, and Calgary) and at the Instituto Cervantes. His most recent book, La diversidad del español y su enseñanza, was published by Routledge in 2021.